

OUR JUNE MEETING

FOCUSING: A SOMATIC APPROACH TO PSYCHOTHERAPY

Focusing was developed by Eugene Gendlin, Ph.D. at the University of Chicago. He found that whatever the self-described approach of the psychotherapist, therapeutic progress was measured by the client's ability to connect with their bodily-felt experience in the moment. These clients were rather inarticulate. They groped for words and explored freshly in the moment what they were actually experiencing. Such exploration often leads to a "felt-shift" in how clients were experiencing difficult life issues.

This presentation will enable you to understand the basics of Focusing and learn simple concrete interventions that can help your clients slow down their speech and be with themselves in a gentle, caring way. Connecting with sensations and feelings that live in the body provides a rich foundation not only for being more intimate with oneself, but also for deepening intimacy with others. According to Dr. Amodeo, focusing is very compatible with Susan Johnson's EFT (Emotionally Focused Therapy) for couples.

Volunteers are love in motion!

~Author Unknown

So much activity in nature this spring reminds me of the energy that the volunteers of RECAMFT put into making our chapter vibrant and vital. Over 20 volunteers each month combine their efforts to put together, layout, publish, and mail our monthly newsletter to each of you. Over 10 volunteers work cooperatively to put together our monthly general meetings. RECAMFT committees of volunteers work throughout the year to bring us interesting speakers, relevant workshops, and professional development opportunities.

It is a great privilege to work closely with such a group of dedicated and energetic individuals. The chair of our newsletter committee, Gail Van Buuren, recently commented that an organization like ours “creates community”. It is the involvement of many people, each bringing a spirit of generosity and desire to be of service, that is the life source of RECAMFT. A big “Thank You” goes to all who actively participate in RECAMFT.

We invite you to be a part of this active community of volunteers that make RECAMFT a rewarding and beneficial “community” for all members. Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions about becoming an active volunteer with RECAMFT.

Act as if what you do makes a difference. It does.
~William James

What You Missed by Michael Krikorian

Worried that your child or client is spending too much time texting or playing games on the Internet and not enough time socializing in the “real world?” Worry that modern youth are addicted to technology and wasting their lives away?

“Relax” says Ofer Zur, Ph.D., because you are reacting out of the mind-set of a “digital immigrant” (Baby Boomer or older) and not understanding the world of the “digital native” (someone under 40 years who has grown up using this technology during their development).

This very interesting and provocative message came to us at our May monthly meeting from Dr. Zur. He helped us see how digital natives who grow up with this technology are expressing their human needs for mastery and connection through the technology which gives them an experience that is hard to grasp by a digital immigrant. He urged us to take the position of an anthropologist entering another culture to see what is going on. We need to drop our pre-conceived notions about texting and internet gaming (game playing) not being “real world,” a waste of time or isolating. Young people do these activities because they are fun, put them in touch and allow them to collaborate with others of like mind, and create feelings of mastery.

Dr. Zur feels we jump to the conclusion of “addiction” way too often when actually we just don’t understand or relate to the activity someone is engaged in. He does see that there is a “dark side” to the digital world that can create problems such as sexting, porn, bullying, suicide sites, terrorism instructions, fake reviews and slander. He also cites the new Facebook phenomenon of people contacting old flames and ending up having affairs or getting divorced.

Dr. Zur believes that a better assessment than “addiction” to digital activities is the question of “balance.” Does this activity enhance or deplete aspects of your life? What is the balance between online and offline living?

Dr. Zur gave us digital immigrant therapists a few tips to help us not get harmed by what we don’t know. For instance, he said we should be aware that people can be saying things about us and our work on sites such as YELP. If we don’t stay on top of this, our reputation can be hurt. He suggested we Google ourselves regularly to see what is connected with our name. He also clarified that Skype and e-mail are not protected forms of communication in terms of confidentiality when communicating with clients, but that landlines and cell phones are considered protected in terms of the professional standard of care. He stated that special services can be obtained for a fee that does allow users protected internet communication.

Thank you, Dr. Zur, for this very informative presentation. For more information on the many classes and services Dr. Zur offers, go to www.ZurInstitute.com or call at (707) 935-0655.

RECAMFT'S New Website

By Michael Montgomery

June 5150

RECAMFT's website has a totally new look! After extensive work with a website design team through the SRJC, our website has a much improved design and layout as well as a new logo! Our aim was to provide a site with a professional look that was also both warm and inviting for members as well as for the public. New features include being able to apply for or renew your membership application online. We are now also able to pay for membership as well as conferences through PayPal using credit and debit cards.

The referral service has a vastly improved page where you or the public can search for therapists' information by name, city, specialty, population served or clinical orientation! The amount of information a referral service member can list about their practice is greatly expanded. A further note. I was recently looking for office information for a local therapist using Google and was taken to RECAMFT's referral page to obtain it! This web presence and linkage with all the major search engines is an important resource for those in private practice.

RECAMFT will continue to keep an archive of our past speakers and newsletters. The newsletter section will not be fully operational for about another week or so. This will allow us to have an online history of our chapter for the past several years and going forward.

For the future, RECAMFT is planning to have a sign in for members where they will be able to create their own user name and password. Referral service members will be able to make changes to their own practice information online themselves and have their picture included if they wish. And the referral search page will be fully integrated with RECAMFT's database. Our new website reflects the spirit and warmth that is a hallmark of RECAMFT. Enjoy!

P.S. Kathy Samoun, who designed our new website (so you can see the kind of work she does), is offering to design websites for therapists at a discount. You can reach her at: katsrjc@gmail.com and see her website at <http://www.daedaldesigns.com>.

Haiti: The Need is still There

By Margaret Newport

The news from Haiti is not new. The need remains great. The earthquake caused enormous damage. In some areas 80% of the buildings collapsed. Refugee camps contain 40,000 to 75,000 people. Food supplies are short. Medical supplies are short. Even before the quake many suffered from poverty and malnutrition. (Eight out of 100 children died before the age of five). Conditions have only become worse. The infrastructure is poor, roads are damaged, water and electricity services are unreliable. There have been outbreaks of tuberculosis and typhoid fever. Sanitation is an ongoing difficulty and threatens more disease.

It was not widely known that, prior to the quake, a large portion of the population suffered from low hemoglobin levels and anemia. This was only discovered when people who survived the quake without injury were tested. Those, who were injured, were noted to be at increased risk for hemorrhage and possible fatal result.

Among the groups responding is an International Volunteer Group known as "Youth with a Mission " or WYAM led by Lori Matthias, RN from Santa Rosa. Lori went to Haiti immediately following the quake and worked there for a month. She plans to return in October taking donations and supplies.

I am sure many of us would like to go to Haiti and help but are unable to. I have been thinking of a small way that might make a big difference. That is to send Vitamins and iron capsules with Lori and WYAM.

Some medical offices have samples and may want to donate. Ask your doctor. Health Food Stores are another option to request donations. There is time before October. I spoke with Lori and she will be happy to take them.

ETHICS ROUNDTABLE

The Ethics Roundtable meets once each in the Fall, Winter, and Spring. Topics for group discussion are generated from our own clinical practices or by an issue that has come up for one of us. For example, we discussed how to create and put in place a Clinical Practice Will, which we all should have.

Our meetings are informative and stimulating and RECAMFT members are invited to attend. No ongoing commitment is required.

OUR OCTOBER WORKSHOP

Gail Van Buuren

On October 2nd, 2010 RECAMFT will be hosting a one-day workshop with two fascinating speakers, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. The focus of the workshop is on managing and improving your private practice. We think you will come away with some really helpful information and ideas.

Our morning speaker is Barbara Griswold, MFT of San Jose whose subject is Sustaining Your Practice in a Recession: How Accepting Insurance Can Keep Your Practice Full. We are planning to have an informal conversational lunch with a choice of bringing your own "brown bag" lunch or purchasing a box lunch through RECAMFT. We think it would be fun to sit around and chat about what is going on in our practices see what we can learn from each other. Of course, going out to lunch or simply getting outside into the fresh air for a picnic lunch are options as well. The Veteran's Hall in Sebastopol is situated in Ives Park where there are nice green areas, swings and play areas, too! In the afternoon Dr. Larry Waldman, Ph.D., ABPP of Scottsdale, Arizona will be presenting The Graduate Course You Never Had: How to Develop, Manage and Market a Flourishing Mental Health Practice –With or Without Managed Care.

Barbara Griswold describes her presentation in this way. "In this economy, clients need therapists who accept their insurance. But must this mean fee discounts for therapists, limited sessions, mountainous paperwork, and compromising confidentiality? This entertaining presentation addresses what EVERY therapist should know about insurance. Even if you never sign a plan contract, what you don't know can hurt you and your clients, so we'll challenge common misconceptions, and discuss costly mistakes therapists make. You'll learn to turn first-time callers into new clients – even if you aren't on their health plan. We'll identify 12 Crucial Questions when checking coverage. Get insider tips for speedy reimbursement, and complete claim instructions."

Larry Waldman points out that in graduate school we never learned how to get patients in the first place. He will give a primer on marketing your mental health practice so you can help more people, free yourself from dependence on insurance, provide the treatment that's best for your patients, increase your income and enjoy a secure future. He plans to teach how to market your practice with total integrity, why your success increases the good you can do for patients, how to place an appropriate value on your skills, a sure-fire method to create a flourishing cash-pay practice, build relationships that build your practice, and how to get "out of the box" and create additional income streams.

Watch for your mailed invitation to this workshop in August and keep the day free in your calendars. This is a workshop you won't want to pass up.

Gail Van Buuren has a private practice in Sebastopol and can be reached at 494-4198 or at www.gailvbtherapy.net
